Threads Of Time

NO, THESE ARE NOT RENDERINGS of some female version of Goofus and Gallant for the back-to-campus issue of Highlights magazine. This is a glimpse of what we were and what we are, two decades apart.

Oh, the clothes, the clothes. Is it any wonder bell bottoms and platform shoes are making a comeback? When they are at once so attractive and so practical? Especially those pants made of double-knit polyester, the kind that sparkles in sunlight—cold in the winter, hot in the summer, the fabric the '70s made famous.

Polyester was just further proof that when there is change, there is not necessarily improvement. Books, hair styles and music are not notably better than 20 years ago; when Rolling Stone moved from San Francisco to New York, it dropped a note. . .

... but diet Coke is a much tastier chemical brew than Tab, compact disc technology is a big leap over eight-track tapes, in-line skates offer speed without the dork-factor of regular roller skates, and today nobody need be haunted by images of a smiling yellow button.

Still, the most significant improvement can only be imagined by students of the '90s. Thanks to time and the Walkman, no one, anywhere, will ever again be forced, against his or her will, to listen to John Denver's "Thank God I'm A Country Boy" over and over again.

within the 1990s. We will continue to focus on the "sameness of product" in many stores, of developing the partnerships that will make us the future retail winners, and of developing the partnerships system. We will continue to maximize the efficiency, discipline, performance, and productivity of the retail distribution system. We have a solid platform of strategy, discipline, performance, and productivity on which we will build for the 1990s. We hope to continue to reward you, our stockholders.
